Memorandum in Opposition by USA as to THOMAS ROBERTSON re 46 MOTION for Reconsideration

11/12/2021

MINUTE ORDER: Defendant Thomas Robertson moves for reconsideration of this Court's 37 Order granting the government's motion to revoke his pretrial release. "Although the Federal Rules do not specifically provide for motions for reconsideration in criminal cases," recognizing "the utility of such motions," courts have imported the "as justice requires" standard from civil cases. United States v. Hassanshahi, 145 F. Supp. 3d 75, 80 (D.D.C. 2015). This standard provides that courts may exercise discretion and grant reconsideration when there has been a clear error or significant change in law or facts. See id. Also, under 18 U.S.C. § 3142(f)(2)(B), a court "may" reopen a hearing if it "finds that information exists that was not known to the movant at the time of the hearing and that has a material bearing on the issue whether there are conditions of release that will reasonably assure the appearance of such person as required and the safety of any other person and the community." Here, Robertson does not raise any error of law, nor does he present any new information that would have a "material bearing" on whether there are conditions of release that will reasonably assure the safety of the community. He states that "[t]he duration of time he has served" (three months) "has taught him to comply with all court orders strictly," and it "has taken a toll on his mental and physical health." Mot. at 2-3. But "the mere passage of time, without a substantial change in the 'underlying reasons for this court's prior decisions' regarding pretrial detention is generally not sufficient to warrant reconsiderations," and he provides no other information about his health. United States v. Bikundi, 73 F. Supp. 3d 51, 55 (D.D.C. 2014). The only new information he raises is the unfortunate loss of his father. That, however, has no bearing on the question of pretrial detention. Accordingly, finding no grounds to alter or amend its prior ruling, it is hereby ORDERED that 46 Defendant's Motion for Reconsideration to Modify Bond Condition to Home Detention is DENIED. Signed by Judge Christopher R. Cooper on 11/12/2021. (lccrc3) (Text entry; no document attached.)
