Dear Judge Christopher Cooper,

I am writing this letter on behalf of Noah Bacon. I have known him for ten years. Noah's mother, Sonia Bacon, is my wife's half-sister.

Throughout the years that I've known Noah, I've always been impressed with his kindness and his curiosity. He is extremely personable and he cares about others. A couple of months ago, Noah was watching our two year old daughter for the first time and he made an immediate connection. They played and laughed and it seemed like they had known each other for a long time. Both my wife and I were touched by his loving nature and his ability to interact with a small child.

Noah is also kind to his friends and family. Each time we visit his family's home in Lexington, Massachusetts, Noah is always helping someone out with a chore or a task around the house. One winter, Noah offered to push our car out of the driveway since there was a lot of ice and snow. He also donated non-perishable food to some kids who were walking through the neighborhood. The last time I saw him, Noah offered to help cook our dinner and clean.

As a member of his family, I am in total agreement that Noah violated the law and he should face the consequences of his actions. My hope is that you consider alternative types of punishments other than jail time. He is hardworking and he has a lot he can offer a community. Whether it's his hard work ethic, teaching skills, or his spirituality, Noah has the ability of rallying others and supporting them. We love him and we are proud of how he has started to find a career path in computer science.

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter. I hope you can see what a great person Noah is and how he continues to make strides to be a better member of our society.

Sincerely,

Taylor White
