

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

v.

ANTONIO LAMOTTA,

Defendant.

Case No. 22-320 (JMC)

MOTION FOR TRANSFER OF VENUE

Antonio Lamotta, through undersigned counsel, and pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 21(a), hereby respectfully requests that this Court transfer the proceedings to his home district in Virginia.¹

¹ Mr. Lamotta has elected to proceed with a bench trial and has waived his right to a jury trial. However, Mr. Lamotta files this motion to preserve this issue.

ARGUMENT

Both the Fifth and Sixth Amendments secure the right to trial by an impartial jury. Const. amends. V, VI; see also Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S. 358, 378 (2010). The importance of an impartial jury is fundamental to Due Process and, notwithstanding constitutional venue prescriptions, when prejudice makes it such that a defendant cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial in the indicting district, the district court must transfer the proceedings upon the defendant's motion. Fed. R. Crim. P. 21(a); see also Skilling, 561 U.S. at 378.

In some instances, the hostility of the venue community is so severe that it gives rise to a presumption of juror prejudice. See Patton v. Yount, 467 U.S. 1025, 1031 (1984) (distinguishing between presumed venire bias and actual juror bias). As recently as 2010, the Supreme Court reaffirmed the presumption approach articulated in Patton and identified three factors to guide the lower courts in determining whether a presumption should attach: (1) the size and characteristics of the jury pool; (2) the type of information included in the media coverage; and (3) the time period between the arrest and trial, as it relates to the attenuation of the media coverage. Skilling, 561 U.S. at 378.

Where it attaches, the Court has further recognized that the presumption of prejudice overrides juror declarations of impartiality during voir dire because such attestations may be insufficient to protect a defendant's rights in particularly charged cases. Murphy v. Fla., 421 U.S. 794, 802 (1975) ("Even these indicia of impartiality might be disregarded in a case where the general atmosphere in the community or courtroom is sufficiently inflammatory.”); see also Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 728 (1961) (“No doubt each juror was sincere when he said that he would be fair and impartial to petitioner, but psychological impact requiring such a declaration before one’s fellows is often its father.”). Indeed, on appeal of a denial of a motion for change of venue, an appellate court need not even examine the voir dire record if it finds that the presumption attached. Rideau v. Louisiana, 373 U.S. 723, 726-27 (1963) (“But we do not hesitate to hold, without pausing to examine a particularized transcript of the voir dire examination of the members of the jury, that due process of law in this case required a [transfer].”). Thus, under this precedent, voir dire is simply not a cure for significant and substantiated Due Process concerns about the jury pool.

There is no debate that the continuous and inflammatory media coverage surrounding January 6 has disadvantaged defendants currently facing trial. Even though more than two years have passed, there is still consistent and regular coverage that highlights defendants in a negative way. The pretrial publicity surrounding January 6 cases has been so pervasive and inflammatory that it “permeat[es] the trial setting . . . [such] that a defendant cannot possibly receive an impartial trial,” the district court must presume local prejudice and transfer the proceeding. United States v. Quiles-Olivo, 684 F.3d 177, 182 (1st Cir. 2012); see also Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 333, 362 (1966) (“Due [P]rocess requires that the accused receive a trial by an impartial jury free from outside influences.”).

CONCLUSION

Because each of the Skilling factors weighs in favor of finding a presumption of prejudice, Mr. Lamotta requests that the Court transfer the case to his home District in Virginia.
